

Distinguished Scientists,

We have started an international book project named “Migration Generating Geographies and International Irregular Migrations” with Peter Lang Publishing House. We are sending you the details of our project (sample topics, dates and editor) below. If you would like to write a chapter for the book, please send your chapter proposals to editor@inglobe.org until April 30, 2020.

You can find details and call for chapter in attachment.

Sincerely

EDITORS

Prof. Dr. Suat KOLUKIRIK
Res. Asst. Elif GÜN

PUBLICATION COORDINATOR

Ragıp PEHLİVANLI (InGlobe)

LANGUAGE OF THE BOOK

English

You may send your study in Turkish for first review.

IMPORTANT DATES

Chapter Proposals Deadline	: March 15, 2020 April 30, 2020
Acceptance Notification	: April 30, 2020
Full Text Deadline	: June 15, 2020 May 30, 2020
Expected Publication Date	: September 15, 2020 September 30, 2020

SUBMISSION PROCEDURE

Submission procedure of international book which is planned to publish with partnership of Peter Lang International Publishing House, one of the biggest and high reputed publishing houses based in Germany, is given below.

- 1) Chapter proposals should be between 1,000 to 2,000 words including type of research, approach, context, connection to the book, and other pertinent information with word (docx) format. Authors should send proposals to editor@inglobe.org.
- 2) Chapter proposals should include names, work and titles, mailing addresses, e-mail addresses and phone numbers of authors in same word file.
- 3) Biographies of authors should be added, maximum 150 words, to end of proposal word document in same file.
- 4) Authors should follow acceptance, proofreading and decline announcements and answer in time.
- 5) Authors should use Cambria font with 12 pt.

RECOMMENDED TOPICS

Chapter proposals are solicited on all topics and issues related to migration generating geographies and international irregular migrations in this book. Desired topics are listed below.

- Irregular Migration and Its International Effects
- Social, Cultural and Economic Dimensions of Irregular Migration
- Temporary Protection Status and Syrian Migration
- EU, Irregular Migration and Migration Law
- Migration Policies and Implementation Examples
- Migration, Social Problems and Social Upheaval
- Migration, Social Cohesion and Cooperation
- Psychology of Migration and Perception of Migrants in Receiving Countries
- Migration Generating Geographies and the Future of Irregular Migration
- Any Case Study on Bilateral and/or Multilateral Relations

CALL FOR CHAPTERS

As it is known, international irregular migration movements are an area which an important political problem and its need to be cooperated for solution with its effects. The migration journeys triggered by political, military, geographical, cultural, social, economic, ecological, and even psychological factors as well as individual factors; reach different social dimensions together with global inequalities, and cause humanitarian problems between countries. This view, which is often described as other, foreign, illegal, immigrant, asylum seeker or refugee, is also discussed and examined within itself. In other words, the question of whether irregular migration movements at the international scale is an obligation or a necessity to the hierarchy of needs also remains an important topic of discussion.

Historically, it is seen that long-distance migration mobility is differentiated in settled and nomadic societies, however, the main factor leading to migration is mostly economic factors. People or societies have always desire better and prosperity through self-realization or an effort to exist. The fact that today's international population mobility is moving from south to north is also a product of living standards and economic expectations. Especially the financial opportunities of the western countries can be seen attractive in the rest of the world, long and dangerous journeys can be taken into consideration. In this sense, as well as the lifestyle awareness that technological development has made clear, the high standards of living that migration generating geographies cannot overcome are the familiar dimensions of international migration mobility.

In the context of migration literature and theories, it should be said that most of the migration examples of today's world are unique and have different definitions. Mass migration movements that emerge in time, space and human dimensions find meaning within the framework of spontaneity and within their own conditions of formation. In one dimension, local and international population mobility and migration processes continue as a result of different dynamics and as a result of continuous dynamism and search for balance.

From an international point of view, the real problem is on which axes the migration process will be handled and evaluated. Especially when looking at global inequalities, underdevelopment, interregional development and demands for democratic development, the claim that international migration is a structural and cyclical reality rather than a problem area seems to be a more correct way. In other words, new forms of "interdependence,, bilateral and regional alliances rapidly transform the lives of many people, and with this transformation the fate of both states and societies is shaped together.

From the perspective of the migration routes and transit countries it is seen to occupy a central place and route geography of Turkey. It should be noted that many asylum seekers or migrants, especially from the countries of Asia, the Middle East, and Africa, use Turkey as a transit country and a region that can be migrated. Turkey's presence on the migration route brings with it the state of being a center of attraction. In other words, Turkey positioned as a center county for asylum seekers and refugees due to geographical features. The idea of reaching out to European countries, the United States and other developed countries over Turkey, keeps Turkey is a country which used for the link of connection purpose. However, the Middle East origin recent irregular migration mobilities have been turned Turkey into a port of refugees and intense irregular migrants Syrian population have been faced. On the other hand, international irregular migration mobilities are directed towards Europe, especially Greece and Italy, present a global scale appearance. Starting from this perspective, an international book call for chapters is made the basis of the topics above which examples of irregular migration targeted Turkey and Europe.

We thank you in advance for your cooperation and contributions and wish you success in your works.

Editorial Board